All I Want For Christmas Is A Billboard?

Two NC Moms, in lieu of Christmas presents, ask their families and friends for the gift of awareness.

Moms Angela Medlin of Cary, NC and Amy Carson of Asheville, NC, sacrifice their Christmas so they can raise awareness of the need for safer vaccines. In lieu of personal Christmas presents, Angela and Amy told their families and friends they would like to have a billboard for Christmas. "The greatest gift we could receive this year would be to give to others the gift of knowledge, so other families would not have to endure this very preventable tragedy", says Angela and Amy.

They are both Moms to sons who have neurodevelopmental disabilities that were caused by a mercury based preservative, thimerosal, used in vaccines and the flu shot. Their children's futures are uncertain, but they are certain they cannot allow this to continue to happen any longer.

Great efforts have been made by parents of injured children to have the use of thimerosal banned and other unnecessary poisons in vaccines be removed. The Homeland Security Bill once held a provision to protect Eli-Lilly, the maker of thimerosal, from any litigation resulting in injuries from their product. Many of the parents have no where to turn for help. The cost of raising their injured children is putting most of them into bankruptcy due to many insurance companies not paying for their desperately needed and very costly medical care and therapies.

"Mainstream medicine will not accept any responsibility for this devastating epidemic of this autistic like mercury toxicity, therefore they ignore the true nature of our children's injuries and refuse to treat them properly, forcing us to go to extreme lengths to treat our child with very expensive therapies that are not covered by our insurance companies", says Angela.

"If doctors and pharmaceutical companies aren't going to tell the truth about poisonous vaccine ingredients then we will," states Amy. "We are tired of the truth being buried and no one helping us with our injured children. There are thousands and thousands of us. This country as a whole has turned their backs on us. It seems everyone is afraid to go up against the pharmaceutical companies. Well, I tell you, we can fight the pharmaceutical companies because there is one thing more powerful than money and that's knowledge. If we have to tell one American at a time that they are being poisoned unnecessarily then by God, that is what we will do. There is power in the people". Their first billboard went up on December 5th in Asheville, North Carolina.

There will be one to follow on January 20th in the Raleigh/Durham area. They make a strong statement that will be sure to gain the interest of all.
