

Redbook magazine publishes important article on vaccine deaths

by Barbara Loe Fisher, co-founder, National Vaccine Information Center

The Sept. 2000 issue of Redbook magazine contains one of the best articles ever written in a major magazine about the catastrophic side effects of vaccines and the trauma parents go through when they are victimized by the medical system.

I helped several of the parents featured in this article -- entitled "Murder? Or A Bad Vaccine?" -- defend themselves against charges of attempted murder when they were accused of shaken baby syndrome after their babies suffered vaccine-induced bleeding in the brain. One father was an anesthesiologist until he was unjustly convicted of murdering the baby daughter, his only child, and is still in prison.

This article is a very important breakthrough in the mainstream media. We need to send a signal to the publishers of Redbook and other magazines who step out of their comfort zone and cover the vaccine reaction story, that they will receive positive feedback in several different ways for doing the right thing.

We are urging everyone to go their local newsstand and buy a copy of Redbook and then write a letter to express their opinion about the article.

Letters can be sent to Redbook Mail, 224 West 57th St., New York, NY 10019 or e-mail: redbook@hearst.com.

The letter must include the date and name of the article, their name, address, and daytime phone number.
